Booth Museum to Offer Dinner Theatre as part of Summer Entertainment Series

JUNE 2010 - The Booth Western Art Museum is pleased to announce the Summer Entertainment Series which this year will feature a Dinner Theatre in the beautiful Booth Ballroom. Held the third Thursday in June, July and August at 7 p.m., visitors may enjoy a live show complete with a delicious buffet dinner for just $25 for Booth members and $30 for non-members. A cash bar will also be available.

The first in the series will be Thursday, June 17, and will feature Jim Dunham performing as Mark Twain. In this show, Dunham will present humorous material the author used during his many speaking engagements around the world, giving the audience an idea of what it might have been like to attend one of Twain's sold out lectures. Later in the evening, Dunham will step out of character and discuss some of Twain's real-life Western adventures and the books he created from these experiences.

On July 15, Doc Stovall will join Dunham as they perform Trails Plowed Under. Dunham will paint and perform as famous Western artist Charlie Russell, completing a copy of one of Russell's paintings, while also reciting favorite passages from Russell's book, Trails Plowed Under. As he paints, Stovall will perform Western songs related to the work of Charlie Russell. All ticket holders will have a chance to win the completed painting at the end of the show.

Closing out the summer on August 19, Dunham and Stovall will partner together once more for Bullets & Ballads. This variety show features the talents of cowboy singer Stovall teamed with gun handler and humorist Dunham. While Dunham performs some of the most famous gun tricks from Western movies, Stovall sings a mix of Western movie standards and his own original work.
